

Chain of Command Process

How to Effectively Communicate with School and District Staff

The Holmdel Board of Education and the Superintendent expect that all concerns be treated with respect. Parents/guardians may be discouraged when they attempt to communicate with central office administrators and school board members and are sent back to building-based officials to resolve a problem their child may be experiencing in school.

To prevent that frustration, parents can become informed about the “chain of command,” or where to begin the communication sequence regarding their problem or concern. Many parent and community questions are easily and completely answered by communicating directly with the educator in charge of the class or program. Each situation should first be addressed at whatever level the initial action was taken, with appeals moving on to the next level in the chain of command.

The easiest way to communicate is via email; a phone call is the next preferable way. Here at Holmdel Public Schools, we ask that you address any issues in the order as laid out in our Chain of Command process below.
